The Florida Transit Operator Trainer Training Program in cooperation with the Florida Department of Transportation and the Center for Urban Transportation Research (CUTR) will be presenting the Transportation Safety Institute’s Fatigue Awareness Seminar.

This train-the-trainer training consists of fatigue awareness seminars conducted over two consecutive days. The seminar highlights current research data on fatigue and sleep deprivation, and their relation to human performance factors in the transit workplace. Fatigue issues are discussed and proactive recommendations to prevent fatigue, fatigue countermeasures and alertness strategies are made. The seminar focuses on the symbiotic roles that the employees, their families, employers, and the environment play in contributing to fatigue. The physiological and psychological aspects of fatigue are also discussed. Emphasis on individual responsibility for healthy living and realistic time management to promote a safe environment for patrons and co-workers is discussed. Additionally, emphasis on the effect of operation’s policies, workplace practices, and organizational culture and the fatigue factors in safety incidents and vehicle collisions will be discussed. Workplace practice issues, and the invitation to partner with government and labor in reducing the significant cost of fatigue to the transportation industry.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND
All levels of managers and supervisors who work in the process of safety program plans; design engineering and construction and technology vendors; and transit consultants and auditors. Safety and security professionals responsible for developing, administrating and implementing system safety and security plans end the enforcement of security procedures.
