The workshop provides in-depth training in cutting-edge technology for transit-specific analysis. By fine-tuning your skills and staying abreast of the latest tools and methods, you will have a unique advantage in facing the ever-changing demands of the transportation profession. Participants will use transportation and transit databases, thus affording real-world experience.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

- Display geographic and tabular data
- Work with geo-referenced data
- Query data using logical expressions
- Find features using spatial relationships
- Edit spatial and attribute data
- Associate tables with joins and relates
- Produce maps, reports, and graphs

MODULES

- Basics of ArcGIS
- Displaying and Georeferencing Data in ArcGIS
- Working with Spatial Data in ArcGIS
- Working with Attributes in ArcGIS
- Querying Your Database in ArcGIS
- Presenting Data in ArcGIS
- Displaying Layers
- Working with Labels and Annotation
- Displaying Locations from Tabular Data
- Analyzing Data with ArcMap
- Presenting Results

The course curriculum was designed for those new to ArcGIS and geographic information systems in general. Participants should be computer literate and have a strong working knowledge of windows software. This hands-on training opportunity is highly recommended for transportation planners and other professionals responsible for analyzing and reporting transit-related data. You will leave this workshop with all the necessary skills to become a successful GIS user.
